Software and Support Firms Merge to Offer One-stop Seismic Interpretation Solution

Calgary, Alberta. May 19, 2009. Zokero Inc., developers of SeisWare seismic interpretation software, and Blue Castle Corporation, support and services provider to the geoscience industry, announced today that they have merged to form SeisWare International Inc.

Ed VanWieren, former president of Zokero Inc., will serve as chief executive officer, and Murray Brack, former president of Blue Castle Corporation, will serve as chief operating officer for SeisWare International Inc.

“Zokero and Blue Castle have been working together as exclusive partners for over 10 years”, says Ed VanWieren, CEO of SeisWare International Inc.

“It’s a logical step for the two companies to merge, thereby creating a stronger financial basis to ensure stability and growth resulting in a better product and support offering for our customers.”

The merger will streamline the ownership and operations of SeisWare International Inc. The new company will be more innovative and efficient, providing benefits to customers by combining the support and development of SeisWare seismic interpretation software via one company instead of two.

“This merger strengthens SeisWare International through unified ownership and a single brand”, says Murray Brack, COO of SeisWare International Inc.

“By combining the two companies, we are providing a common vision and goals for all employees. This allows us to maintain our focus on providing great service, innovative and competitively priced seismic interpretation software.”

This merger is effective as of May 1, 2009. The company will operate out of its current premises at #1100, 736-8 Ave SW, Calgary, AB, Canada. All employees at both former businesses will be retained.
